Sam Brown was a typical youngster who liked nothing better than hanging out with his friends at the local skateboard park. He wasn't too impressed when his parents announced that they would be touring the West Country for their annual holiday. They would be staying with his mum's old aunt on her farm in Devon. He knew that his mum and dad would want to visit a lot of old historic places and beauty spots, and the thought of spending all that time cooped up in the family car did not thrill Sam at all. All this changed when he saw a video about surfing when they stopped at a service station. He immediately wanted to try surfing, and from then on, he pestered his dad to buy him a surfboard. With the help of the old aunt, (who turned out to be a real good sport), he persuaded his dad to let him have some lessons. From this moment he was hooked! He became involved with a whole bunch of colourful characters who helped him follow his dream of learning to surf. A mystical reclusive Hawaiian became Sam's mentor, sharing his magical powers, teaching him the secrets of the noble art of surfing, and building him a special magical surfboard. His life was never the same again, as he became a champion junior surfer.
